

Coronavirus: Information for Prospective Students

If you're a prospective student and concerned about the potential impact of the coronavirus outbreak on your studies, we would like to provide you here with the latest information and advice and will regularly update this page. Please also consider the general EUR policy on guaranteeing your studies for the academic year 2020-21 and the FAQ's provided by EUR relating to policy measures in light of COVID-19.

The global spread of the coronavirus (COVID-19) is already having a massive impact on universities around the world. In the Governance of Migration and Diversity Master we have moved all our education activities online in light of the COVID-19 measures and could thereby ensure that our current students are able to complete their Master and graduate this year. We have done so by live online lectures and recorded lectures, by transforming regular exams into take home exams and by keeping up regular interactions with our students as they progress into the Master thesis trajectory via Zoom conferences, Padlet and Microsoft Teams chats.

Concerns about whether you need to change your study plans are understandable, but we remain committed to providing our Master program also in the coming year, irrespective of the developments around COVID-19. We are proud that we can say that our experience with blended learning (the combination of live teaching with online teaching), make us Corona-proof and we can provide you with an unforgettable MA experience no matter how the situation develops in the coming months.

Are you wondering whether COVID-19 affects your application to our Master program? We can reassure you that we are continuing to accept applications for our program starting later this year. In fact, we are receiving many applications for next year at the moment and are continuing with our selection as usual. So if you are interested in this GMD master and would like to join us in the fall, don't hesitate to apply! We will be looking forward to assess your application and to let you know whether you are admitted as a student to the GMD cohort of 2020-2021!
